

Certificate of compliance - this is a document confirming that a certain product safety and quality requirements that are established in regulations or standards.

These documents are the state standards or technical regulations.

Today, the main and most common system of standards operating in the territory of the Russian Federation

-
GOST R is adopted during the Soviet period.

But at the same time, thanks to the reforms taking place in Russia, aimed at harmonizing national standards may increase the competitiveness of domestic producers.

Therefore, an outdated system of standardization that does not meet modern requirements, are replaced by technical regulations that govern safety issues.

To date, the Russian company "Standard Test" has all the powers to issue the certificate of conformity, which confirms the Certificate of Accreditation in Rostechregulirovanie. Every product that has received a certificate of conformity confirms the quality and safety for the consumer and, therefore, has every right to distribute.

The consumer must be convinced that buying high quality products, corresponding to the list of requirements that protect their rights. Some entrepreneurs to raise the demand for their products, conduct product certification purpose, even if it does not require a Federal Law.

Company "Standard Test" appreciates the time and money to customers, and therefore execution of all documents takes over, freeing, a customer of the mess. In addition, we have the opportunity to work with the products of various industries and consider your financial ability and a target date.

You will receive a document of certification only after all necessary procedures (primarily the analysis of documentation and testing of samples), and for some products may require a large number of documents (certificate of state registration of products, fire certificate, etc.) numbers that you see on the form of certification.

Today, the market is full of variety of products, which means that competition is increasing. On the recommendation of experts, to ensure that your product has taken a high level in the market and great demand and the confidence of consumers, you need to document its compliance with safety standards. To do this, you can get a certificate of compliance voluntarily, even though Russian law does not require it in an orderly fashion.

The scheme of voluntary certification does not differ from the mandatory procedure, except that the customer chooses the standards according to which the certification is carried out.

Depending on the scheme of issuing a certificate and type of product, you can get the paper for a period of one to seven days, and the managers of our company always give you a list of necessary documents.